FOTOSEPTIEMBRE USA, begins today, in the city of San Antonio.

On the long list of San Antonio festivals, FOTOSEPTIEMBRE USA® has grown into the most anticipated in the visual arts arena. Beginning today, international photography takes center stage. This year's festival dates are August 20 - October 8 and includes exhibits in the city of San Antonio as well as the neighboring Texas hill country towns of Boerne, Kerrville, Fredericksburg, and New Braunfels.

FOTOSEPTIEMBRE USA began back in 1996, and at that time included a small group of conferences and exhibits. Since then, a strong community involvement has helped ensure its success. The community, along with photography's ongoing popularity, a solid organizational approach, and the concept of an exhibition oriented festival has created an open door approach to the world of photographic art. These factors have allowed the festival to grow in size and stature

From museums to coffee houses, venues in these cities and towns become major players in the effort to promote international photography. On exhibit you will find a rare combination of photography images ranging from local to international, created by established and emerging photographers. Although talented and in possession of a good eye, these individual artists are all part of a more powerful theme: people who see differently, who challenge themselves, and who have committed themselves to their craft.

The festival remains strong in its belief of photography as an art form and as a means of cultural expression. It has also helped establish a solid link between outreach, artistic advancement, and economic development within the community.

This strong community involvement has helped produce, as Michael Mehl, Festival Director, fondly states, "... a unique animal in the world of festivals." Indeed, nowhere can one find a city caught up in the frenzy of a photography celebration such as in San Antonio. For six weeks, the city becomes a photography gallery, with subject matter as varied as one would imagine a group of international photographers could offer.

Thanks to its growing popularity, Mehl, and partner Ann Kinser, Festival Coordinator, now work 2-3 years in advance. Promotion of this international event also includes a series of online exhibitions. If you, or someone you know, is an individual with a commitment to photography, visit the website for guideline information on festival/web galleries submissions.

A true community event, FOTOSEPTIEMBRE USA is open to everyone. Many exhibition openings are scheduled on the same dates, by geographic location. Artists and venues benefit from increased attendance. Photography fans benefit from the easy access that a concentrated group of openings provide.

San Antonio attractions are many. Come see why the spotlight on international arts is currently shining on FOTOSEPTIEMBRE USA.
