This photograph accentuates the vastness of this beautiful desert area. The line of the road and its yellow strip lead our eye deeper into the image. The line of white clouds directs us to the rain cloud which then takes us down to the horizon line. Everything takes us to the horizon line which is centered directly in the center letting us know that both the sky and the land are equally important.

Fotoseptiembre USA is still going strong. There is so much excellent photography out there for San Antonio to see. Go to fotoseptiembreusa.com for more information of all of the exhibitions out there and for blog posts about the work from the director of Fotoseptiembre, Michael Mehl. And remember if you want to become a better photographer there is no better way than going out and "looking" at photography! For San Antonio photographers there is no excuse because for the month of September you are surrounded city wide by photography.

Would you like to submit a photo? Email to nancc@wildmail.com. In the subject area put "WOAI Photo of the day." Make sure you include your name and as much information as possible about the photo. Does it have personal meaning? Is there a funny story surrounding the photo? Did you use special techniques? Let us know.
