Fotoseptiembre USA, the annual, monthlong photo fest, kicks into gear this weekend. Shows opening Friday night include "No Escape: Photographs of the Brothers Montiel Klint," an exhibit of staged photographs by Mexican siblings Fernando and Gerardo Montiel Klint, 6 p.m. at the San Antonio Museum of Art, 200 W. Jones Ave.; and "Poetic," an exhibit of work by Elva Salinas and Luisa Wheeler curated by Kathy Vargas, 6:30 p.m. at Rendon Photography & Fine Art, 733 S. Alamo St. The show at Rendon is also part of the monthly First Friday art walk in King William.

The event keeps rolling with "Slanted Glances: Idiosyncratic Interpretations of Independence and Revolution in Mexico," a group exhibition; "Oyeme Con Los Ojos," New Orleans photographer Josephine Sacabo's series of images inspired by 17th-century Mexican nun Sor Juana Inés de la Cruz; and "Halfway Child," an exhibit including images by Mexican playwright and novelist Josefina Niggli. The trio of shows open at 4 p.m. Saturday at the Instituto Cultural de México in HemisFair Park. The weekend wraps with "Land, Identity, and Image," a lecture by Patricia Mendoza, founder of Fotoseptiembre in Mexico, 5 p.m. Sunday at the Instituto Cultural de México. The talk will be presented in English.
